

Maciej Medyk – COT6930 – Homework 4

Question 1 – Concepts [2.50pt]

Mapreduce (including Map and Reduce) [0.50pt].

MapReduce is a programming platform and implementation for processing and generating very large data sets with parallel and distributed algorithm on the cluster. MapReduce is composed of Map() function that performs filtering and sorting and Reduce() function that performs summary operations. Map function takes a series of key value pairs and processes each to generate output key value pairs. If for example application is doing word count the map function will break a line into single words and output key value pair for each word where key would be the word and value would be a count. Reduce function iterates through values that are associated with the key, summarizes values, and produces output. In word count example the reduce function would take value from each keys that are same and summarize them to a single output to provide final count of the word. MapReduce libraries have been written in many programming languages and popular open-source implementation is Apache Hadoop.

Combiner [0.50pt].

Combiner can be referred to as semi-reducer in MapReduce and it's an optional function. The purpose of this function is to reduce the amount of data driven to the disk and transmitted over network. Its flow is usually located after map function and before reducer functions and serves to lighten the workload on the reducers.

Hadoop Distributed File Systems [0.50pt].

Hadoop Distributed File Systems (HDFS) is distributed file system designed to run on commodity hardware. HDFS provides high throughput access to application data and is suitable for applications that have very large data sets which are stored reliably and streamed at high bandwidth to user applications.

Hadoop Name Node [0.50pt].

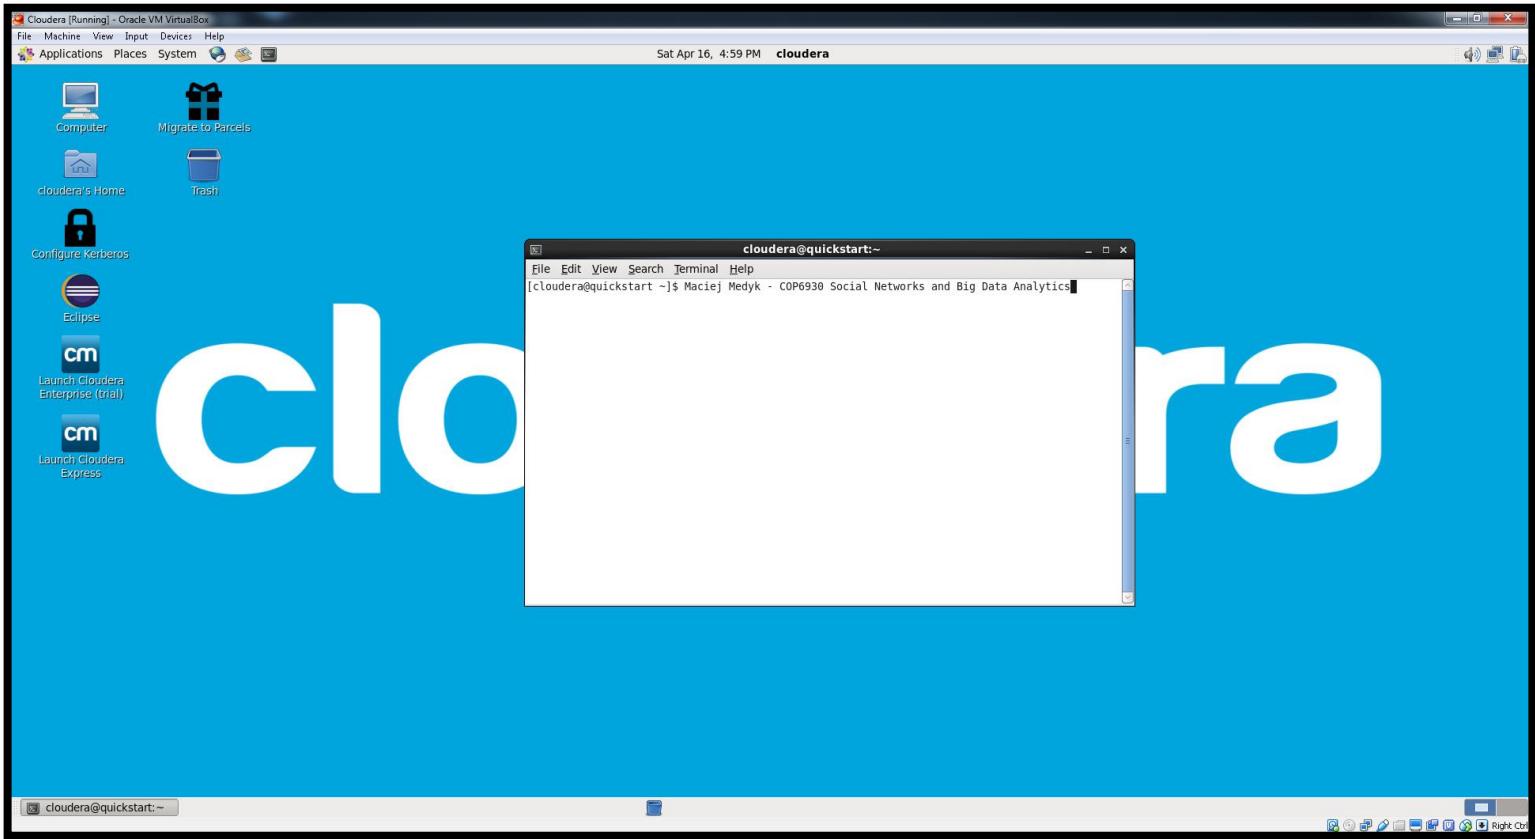

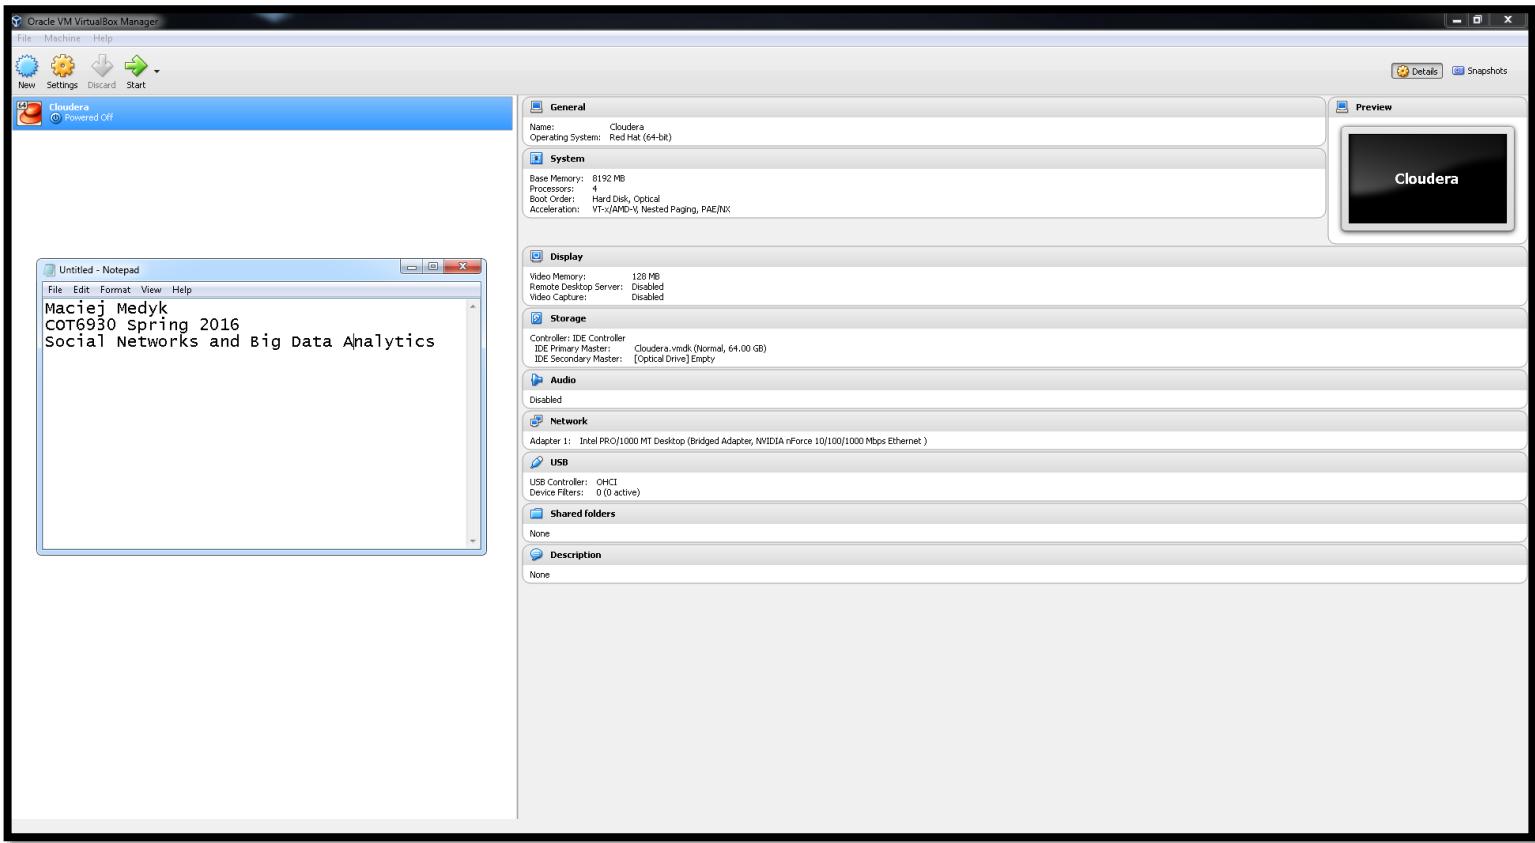

HDFS cluster consists of single NameNode which is a master server that manages file system namespace and regulates access to files by client. NameNode maintains the file system namespace, regulates client's access to files, executes file system operations such as renaming, opening, closing of files and directories, and it manages mapping of blocks to DataNodes.

Hadoop Data Node [0.50pt].

DataNodes are responsible for serving read and write request from the file system clients and perform block creation, deletion, replication upon instructions from NameNode. DataNodes normally created for every node in the cluster and they manage storage attached to the nodes that they run on.

Question 4 – Mapper Functions [3.00pt]

Please modify your Hadoop Project in Question 3, to create a new project “WordCountLmc”, which uses local in-mapper-combing to count word frequency. Please use “genesis.txt”, “luke.txt”, and “kings.txt” as input (place all three files in a folder named “input”), and report the running results of the project. [1.00pt]

The screenshot shows an Eclipse IDE environment with the following details:

- Project Structure: The "WordCount" project contains a "src" folder with subfolders "org.myorg" and "WordCount". Inside "WordCount", there are files "WordCount.java", "WordCountGmc.java", and "WordCountLmc.java". "WordCountLmc.java" is the active file.
- Code View: The code for "WordCountLmc.java" is displayed, showing a Mapper implementation that performs local combing using a HashMap. It reads from "genesis.txt", "luke.txt", and "kings.txt" and writes to "WordCountFiles/output/*".
- File Browser: A separate window titled "Desktop - File Browser" shows the local file system. It lists several files including "Configure Kerberos", "Eclipse", "Launch Cloudera Enterprise (trial)", "WordCount.jar", "WordCountGmc.jar", and "WordCountLmc.jar". The "WordCountLmc.jar" file is highlighted with a yellow box.
- Notepad: A "Untitled - Notepad" window contains the following text:

Please compare running results from three MapReduce Tasks, WordCount, WordCountLmc, and WordCountGmc. Analyze and report the differences (i.e. Explain the benefits of in-mapper-combining, and explain how local and global in-mappercombining achieve the efficiency gain) [1.00pt]

Experiment	File Bytes Read	File Bytes Write	Map Tasks Time (ms)	Reduce Tasks Time (ms)
WordCount	1,167,591	2,781,331	33,857	8,810
WordCountLMC	886,634	2,220,401	33,732	8,873
WordCountGMC	162,168	771,469	32,010	7,985
Average	738,798	1,924,400	33,200	8,556

Seems like WordCountGMC program using Global In-Mapper Combining run the fastest and used least amount of bytes to read and write in file system. The WordCountLMC was far less efficient and its runtime was close to original WordCount program. Finally, the original WordCount seemed as the least efficient algorithm as it used more bytes for read and write operations and its mapping task time was the longest. All programs produced a report with 414 words counted from text in all three files. Report files were included for each operation in BlackBoard.
